

Student Appreciation Days 2008

Student Appreciation Days were held on the Fredd campus on October 27-October 28, 2008. The bags given this year consisted of a pencil, calculator, stress ball, book and flyer. The book that was chosen this year was written by Robin Roberts and is titled, From the Heart: Seven Rules to Live By. Flyers helped to inform students about the Learning Center on the Fredd campus. It told hours and the services that are available.

All instructors had a flyer placed in their mailbox and were called to remind them about the activity. The entire Heavy Equipment class was brought over by the instructor. A few of the students didn't realize there was a library on campus. I think this helps prove that Student Appreciation Days are needed to make students aware of the services we offer. Also, the Respiratory Therapy students flocked to the library to receive their bags when they realized there was a calculator in the bag. They were having a test that day and needed calculators for the test!

Students who entered the library received a bag. Next year, we will order more books because we ran out this year. Bags were given to Mr. Albritton, Mrs. Edwards and Ms. Cook for their evening classes. We believe the reason for the shortage on the books is due to the increase of academic classes on the Fredd campus. 200 bags with the book by Ms. Roberts were handed out. Approximately 30 bags without the book were given. Books, bags, calculators and stress balls were made possible by Title III funding.
